A Queer Smashup.

Quite a small smashup occurred on the Central road on Friday evening, in which an engine and three cars were quite badly damaged. It happened in a very unusual manner. An extra freight had come down from the north, and the engine had been cut off from the train just out of the city, and the train crew came to town on the engine for the purpose of getting supper, it being about 8:30 at night.

The crew had just left the engine when the locomotive started back up the track. One of the trainmen came out of the depot just after the engine started and he tried to catch it, but was distanced in the first lap and raced out of the race. The locomotive continued up the track, gaining speed right along, until the train was reached, at which time it was going at a pretty merry clip.

The train consisted of about thirty cars of pulpwood, so that when the engine struck it there was a good solid foundation to upset against. Three of the cars were pretty badly bruised up, and the engine was also damaged considerably.

What caused the engine to start off alone is not known, altho railroad men say that there are a number of reasons why it might have done so.

Will Have a Telephone.

There is every indication now that the residents of Rudolph and vicinity will have a telephone system in the near future. The matter of having telephonic communication out there has been agitating them for some time but the matter has been put off from time to time because nobody took the initiative in the matter.

The people out there were ready to rent phones, but the local company was not in a position to build the line for them, and the consequence is that they have got together and organized a company and intend to build the line for themselves.

A meeting was held in Rudolph on Monday and among the attendants were John A. Gaynor and Ben Smart of this city, the latter two gentlemen being there to give them any information possible concerning the cost of connections and the method to be used in organizing. At the meeting it developed that they could figure on about twenty telephones to start with. This is a remarkably good showing and it is really remarkable that so many could be secured at the start.

It is the intention to put in an exchange at Rudolph and then run a trunk line to this city to connect with the local exchange. By this method the people out that way can be given the best possible service, as in many cases each subscriber will have a line to himself, which is much more satisfactory than the party line method.

Bentz-Juneau.

Wm. Bentz and Miss Lydia Juneau were married on Monday by Justice B. L. Brown. The young people left the same day for Green Bay on a short wedding tour, after which they will return and make their home in this city.

The bride is a resident of Merrill and was attending business college in this city. The groom has made his home here for some time past, being employed by L. Reichel the jeweler. Their friends here will wish them success on their journey thru life and extend the heartiest of congratulations.

Silver Jubilee Class.

On Monday evening, Feb. 24, a Silver Jubilee Class of about twenty members will be initiated at the Foresters' hall.

The initiatory services will be held in the Foresters' hall and later in the evening there will be a banquet at the Eagles' hall, at which the ladies will be present. After the banquet the Foresters' and their ladies will indulge in a social dance. It is expected that there will be a large crowd in attendance.

Broke a Leg.

Geo. Schacht, who was employed at the poor farm, met with a serious accident on Monday by which he broke the bones in his left leg. He was engaged in hauling wood and he stood upon the load to put on his fur coat, when the wagon struck an obstruction and threw him off the load backward. He is at the home of Chris Gettall on the east side and is reported to be getting along as well as can be expected under the circumstances.

Candidate for City Treasurer.

I have been asked and agreed by my friends to become a candidate for city treasurer. After considering the matter carefully I have decided to become a candidate and take this method of announcing the fact. If elected will perform the duties of that office to the best of my ability. Yours respectfully,

Frank R. Schuman.

Eleven new members were initiated into the Elks on Tuesday evening, the ceremony being followed by a feed and smoker.

Those who went in were Dr. D. A. Teller, Roy Lester, Dr. W. O. Blanchar, Arthur Madson, John Hildner, Jos. J. Martin, August Gettall, Geo. K. Muir, Frank Abel, Lynn Henn and Mr. Chose.

Farmers' Institute.

The Farmers' Institute to be held at Babcock occurs on Thursday and Friday of this week, February 20 and 21. As usual on such occasions an elaborate program has been prepared.

Wants a Moral City.

The following platform has been handed the Tribune by one of our citizens. It being his idea that at the coming spring election a man should be elected for mayor who would stand on such a platform, and if elected, enforce the same.

H. E. Fitch was elected a member of the permanent organization and D. D. Conaway was elected a delegate from this district to attend the Democratic convention.

"Be it resolved, that the saloons of this city be closed at 11 p. m. and remain closed until 5 a. m. on the following morning, and--"

That the existing state laws and city ordinances regulating the sale of intoxicating drinks be enforced, and--

That license issue only to persons of good repute for sobriety and integrity who have been residents of this city for more than two years last past, and--

That during the next two years the affairs of the city be so economically conducted and managed that the present financial deficit in city and school funds shall be wiped out without increasing the present high rate of taxation."

We think the platform is all right, and no man who is looking to the betterment of the city will dispute it, but at the same time, we consider that there are some provisions that would not be enforced in this city.

The first clause, referring to eleven o'clock closing of the saloons. We do not think a majority of the people would be in favor of this altho we may be mistaken. There is one thing certain and that is that it would be a good thing for the community, the saloon keepers, and the men who frequent the saloons, if some time was set for their closing and the law enforced to the letter.

The second clause which refers to the enforcement of the state laws regulating the sale of intoxicating liquors is all right. Such laws should be enforced, and when a city officer stands for election he is supposed to stand for the enforcement of such laws as the people have passed for their government, and he is also supposed to use his efforts to secure their enforcement even tho he may not believe exactly that way himself.

Then there is the matter of granting license to persons who are not of good repute. We all believe in favor of that great commander, William Jennings Bryan, as the next democratic candidate for president of the United States; and we hereby instruct our delegates to the democratic national convention at Denver, to vote as a unit for William Jennings Bryan as the democratic nominee for president, first, last and all the time.

A Step in the Right Direction.

A Long Feat Went Supplied.

Mr. Bodine has started an employment bureau; any person out of employment can have their name and occupation recorded at this office and when he has a call for their special work they will be notified of it and then they can make such arrangements as they see fit. His business will be advertised in the papers at Grand Rapids and the adjoining towns. The first on the list will have the first chance at all times. Fees reasonable, and a rebate will be given when they get employment.

Parties will be notified as fast as they are called for. This is for men, boys and girls. No matter what their occupation is. Office at No. 108 Grand Ave. near the bridge on the west side.

Second hand goods of any sort can be put in a list and buyers found for them such as wagons, plows, household goods, also horses and cows, in fact anything you wish to dispose of can be listed and buyers found.

Death of Mrs. Smith.

Mrs. Patrick Smith, one of the old residents of Grand Rapids, died on Saturday at her home on Ninth street on the east side. Deceased had been more or less of a sufferer for several years, being confined to her home much of the time.

She is survived by two children, Mrs. H. Pollards and Patrick Smith, Jr., her husband having died within the past year.

The funeral was held on Tuesday morning from St. Peter and Paul church, Rev. Wm. Redding officiating.

Local Highs Win.

The Lincoln high school basket ball team played with the team from Plainfield on Saturday night and won the game by a score of 32 to 10.

The game was a good one and was enjoyed by a large number of spectators. There was some hard luck on both sides so that this part of it was about even. The locals were too fast for the visitors, however, and had the game all their own way the greater part of the time.

The program is provided by the art committee, whom chairman is Mrs. L. B. Brown, and promises to be one of the most interesting of the year.

The three previous meetings were devoted to philanthropic subjects and were loyally supported by the membership.

With this satisfactory record it is with the greatest pleasure that a meeting devoted to self culture, the study of art, is contemplated.

For an afternoon and evening at least the members may forget the wrongs to be righted and take a little journey with Mrs. Hall of Chicago will be delivered in the evening in the high school auditorium and a small admission will be charged to defray expenses.

FASHIONS FOR THE FAIR

IN SLUMBER ROBES

ONE OF THE FINEST OF THE NIGHTGOWN MODELS.

Exquisite French Lingerie Employed in Empire Piece with Novel Sleeves—Touches That Give Quaint and Picturesque Air.

At this season of the year women's minds dwell on dainty lingerie and the splendid offerings that are to be found in the shops. It is the time when slightly worn or passe wardrobes are replenished for the spring. Among the many nightgown models deux and embroidery applique from the high waist belt to the neck. There is no trimming below the ribbon run bading which forms the belt, only full widths of the sheerest nainsook.

The valenciennes strips are applied in an attractive lattice pattern, with tiny diamond shaped pieces of the nainsook separating the lace bands.

The neck of the gown is cut in a Dutch square, with a band of lace outlining it; a tiny heading heads this, while inside is a narrow frill of lace to finish the neck. The heading is a premium on criminal acts.

The report covers the period from August 4, 1907, to January 1, 1908.

During that time the total number of fires in the state was 790, with a total property loss of $2,303,748.

The largest loss sustained in any one county was in Douglas, owing to the large elevator fire, the amount being $1,688,824.

The next largest was in Milwaukee county where the loss was $284,760.

The largest number of buildings affected in any one class was dwellings, with 311. The next largest number was barns, with 136 affected.

In connection with the loss on dwellings the report calls attention to the fact that the largest number of fires were caused by defective heating apparatus, and property owners are urged to use care in looking after the condition of fuses. In the case of barns it is shown that out of the 186 fires 69 were caused by lightning.

Persons in Washington familiar with the conditions existing at Fairbanks say that trouble is the outcome of a strike a year or more ago for higher wages and shorter hours for the miners.

JANESVILLE WOMAN MURDERED.

Hotel Employee Found in Her Room with Her Throat Cut.

"I had eczema for over two years. I had two physicians, but they only gave me relief for a short time and I cannot enumerate the ointments and lotions I used to no purpose. My ankles were one mass of sores. The itching and burning were so intense that I could not sleep. I could not walk for nearly four months. One day my husband said I had better try the Cuticura Remedies. After using them three times I had the best night's rest in months unless I took an opiate. I used one set of Cuticura Soap, Oil, menthol, and PDBs, and my ankles healed in a short time. It is now a year since I used Cuticura, and there has been no return of the eczema. # FOR HER YOUNGER SON over. If no kith, or kin, he was free to go his way. If his management of the farm had not more than compensated for his early keep, he would square accounts when once outside.

By HUGH PENDEXTHER

Not his mother? Then no one owned him; to no one did he owe filial affection. And he could have cursed the garrulous old tongue that snapped the bond, while a consciousness of self-pity made his eyes fill and his throat ache.

"Cal! Cal!" broke in her shrill voice from the porch. "What be ye moonin' out there alone fer? Land sakes! I never see a Humphrey like you before. Come in here an' hear th' news. Old Uncle Jansen has just dropped dead, th' fish peddler says. Took with heart failure, or something, just as he was goin' ter fill his pipe. That's what ye give up!"

He felt his way to the door wearily, and had almost reached the porch before he remembered the old man's words: "Guess don't nobody in th' deestrict know it."

If he was dead, why should she learn of his discovery?

News was scant commodity in East Oxford, but the youth lost sight of curiosity when he gained the kitchen and had heard the fish peddler, extremely important and ponderous, repeat his story.

"Poor man!" cried Mrs. Humphrey. "We used to know my husband when they were both boys."

It must have been that Cal was unconsciously intent on concealing his wound, or else the pauper's death had jarred him back to normality and reminded him that this far there was nothing to substantiate his fears, and that his perturbation in the barn had been uncalled for. He smiled sadly as he sat before the dying fire on the hearth long after the paddies had departed.

Should he apprise her of his knowledge? Only sit here he knew it. He shrank from the ordeal, and yet selfishness, or some dumb instinct, begged for sympathy, precluded his hugging the intelligence to himself. It seemed as if she ought to be told and the deception ended. It was the battle with self, a tumult of unrest.

The old clock ticked monotonously to a late hour; as the young heart fought first on one side then on the other in the conflict. There was always the faint hope that Uncle Jansen had imagined it. He would go to bed and grapple with it anew.

As he came to this conclusion, her voice broke the silence in calling from her room:

"Why don't you sit along to bed, Cal? Roger has been asleep more'n two hours. Never see a Humphrey yet that wasn't anxious to sleep."

"Mother," he cried, mechanically entering her darkened room almost before he knew it. "Uncle Jansen told me something to-day—a secret. He said a baby boy, a son of a Rand Philpot, was adopted into this family. He told me, mother, I am that boy."

"No, mother, it is Cal," he said, softly.

She rose slowly and pressed a hand to her breast.

"Cal!" she gasped. "An' Roger?"

"He remains," he replied, gently. "You know a Humphrey had to have no stopping him."

"C'ml," she cried, placing both hands on his broad shoulders. "It's really you?"

"It kind of evens it up," he said almost bashfully. "It's a bit of that pothe justice you read about. I'm glad he won. He deserved it."

But her eyes read the truth and as she flung her arms about his neck she cried: "O, my son! Ye did it fer Roger."

"It's true, then?" he choked, seizing her thin hand convulsively.

A mighty sob shook her for a moment, and she could only groan. "Oh, my boy! both my boys! Why did he tell? Why must he tell? All these years for nothin'! Oh, my son, my son!"

Her grief sent a shiver through his lips, as though she repeated the lament of Absalom's father; and his young heart went out to her as it had never been aroused to yearn before.

"Hush, hush, dear!" he cried softly, kissing her hand. "Roger will hear."

"Yes, yes," she muttered, sitting up and reaching for him through the darkness. "Do not let him know. Oh, I know not what to do. When yer father died—"

"My father?" he repeated dully.

"The only father ye ever had," she wept. "When he was dyin' he made me promise never to tell. 'No one knows, or will know,' he whispered to me. 'Promise.' An' I promised. It would seem as if my lips must be sealed now that that medlin' man has spoke, but I can't see my way clear to-night. Oh, I must pray over it; pray over it, Cal."

"No one shall know till you speak," he said softly, rising to go.

"Come back," she whispered.

"Promise me ye'll always love him as yer brother."

"I promise. He shall always come before me."

"Mother!" he cried, hoarsely.

"No," she sobbed. "he didn't. Thank God! he didn't. There are other terms of schoolin', but thank God! he come home to-night a better Humphrey than when he went away, and learned more of goodness than a whole life in college can teach."

"Ye see, dear; Uncle Jansen was old 'an' forgetful 'an' slightly mixed up. Roger was 'th' boy we adopted, dear."

"Mother!" he cried, hoarsely.

"No," she sobbed. "he didn't. There are other terms of schoolin', but thank God! he come home to-night a better Humphrey. And this conclusion satisfied the older youth. While Roger's ready assurances would stand him in good stead, he had but a slim chance in competing with Cal in what he did best."

"To his optimistic mind, life on the campus was a climax of felicity. The athlete filled his heart to overflowing. To be of it—to wear class colors and numerals—four years of bliss!

Cal eyed it from a different perspective. It was a stalling stone, not a founting place. His inclination was to the laboratories, library, and the classrooms.

They had come together and had taken one room. Soon the one scholarship for his district would be awarded, and as the few others from No. 6 were but poorly prepared for the contest, the prize must obviously go to a Humphrey. And this conclusion satisfied the older youth. While Roger's ready assurances would stand him in good stead, he had but a slim chance in competing with Cal in what he did best.

And the latter, as with moody eyes, watched the joyous throng of low-life chaperons, and drank in the refined dignity of the seniors, again served dignity of her bedroom, and heard her tear-choked voice.

"What was it she had?" Roger asked slowly, on entering the kitchen.

Mrs. Humphrey, a thin, worn woman, creased her forehead in slight irritation as she mildly complained:

"Ready an' cold. Why can't ye be hand as Roger is? He's ate an' done most' th' chores by now. What made ye so late?"

He gazed at her mutely for a few seconds before explaining how he came to be delayed.

It was on his lips to tell her all, but Roger's breezy entrance from the study stayed his tongue, and he ate in moodily silence. With dazed quietude he told himself it was horribly false.

Since the death of Humphrey, senior, Roger had been a charge to him. Never in any mischievous himself, always grave and kind, he had almost taken a parent's place in tolerating the pranks of his brother.

It all came back to him, discordant and distorted, as he pushed away his plate and rose from the table; and went to the bar to be alone.

There in the dark he thought it

Canada Wants Land Surveyors

The large number of surveyors required in Canada, to lay out the farm lands of the western prairies for the tens of thousands of new settlers who are arriving every year has led the Dominion government to offer special inducements to young men to enter this profession. A candidate must spend three years as pupil to a Dominion land surveyor, one of these years being spent on a survey party.

New University Courses.

A number of new courses are to be offered for the first time during the second semester of the University of Wisconsin, which begins Monday, Feb. 17. Professor M. P. Ravenal, recently appointed head of the department of bacteriology, has a new course in the biology and chemistry of water supplies, and a course in medical bacteriology. The department of history offers for the first time a course entitled the spread of Greek civilization from the earliest period; and a course on the German revolt of the sixteenth century. Professor D. C. Moore has a new course on the crusades. Professor Jules E. Olson of the department of Scandinavian language and literature has two new courses in Ibsen's dramas in English translation. In the department of political science there is to be given a course of lectures in German entitled Deutsches Staatsrecht, by Frerich von Tschernow, German fellow in political science. There will also be a course in constitutional law cases showing the development of interpretation relating to the clauses dealing with the regulation of interstate commerce. A course in general ornithology, designed to give a general account of the structure and life of birds, a large part of which is to consist of field trips for the identification and study of common spring birds, will be given in the department of zoology by Dr. George Wagner. Professor G. F. Burgess of the department of applied electro-chemistry has arranged a new course in the manufacture and distribution of gas; and courses in chemical machinery and appliances, chemical manufacture, and metallurgical calculations, will also be given. J. H. Bartlett, U. S. Weather Observer, offers a course in climatology, with lectures and laboratory work.

Experiment Station Reports.

The twenty-fourth annual report of the Agricultural Experiment Station of the University of Wisconsin for the year ending June 30, 1907, has just been issued in book form, comprising a volume of 430 pages of interesting data upon the research and experimental work along agricultural lines conducted at the state university. The report is profusely illustrated, with seventy-seven cuts and 104 tables of statistics, giving detailed information of the work of the departments of animal husbandry, agricultural chemistry, bacteriology, dairy husbandry, horticulture, soils, cranberry investigations, potato sprouting, tuberculous post-mortems, northern stations, butter and cheese scoring exhibitions, inspection work in feeds, fertilizers, stallion service, official dairy tests, nurseries, tobacco culture, and the prospective work in seed control. There is also much interesting description of the work done in cooperation with the United States Department of Agriculture and with state organizations. Maps are included which show the development of factory dairying in the state, and the field work in the drainage of land of various sorts. The bulletins and annual reports of the experiment station are published free distribution to residents of Wisconsin.

University Butter and Cheese Scoring Exhibitors from Wood County.

Or five hundred and forty-five creameries and cheese factories, which have taken part in the Dairy School scoring exhibitions, which were organized last May, the following names represent Wood County: Ed Gejka, Vesper; A. S. James, Marshfield; M. A. Baader, Milladore; J. W. Churney, Millidore; and John Eulner, Marshfield.

All indications point to a very large number of exhibitors the coming year. Buttermakers and cheesemakers from this county, who desire to take part in these scoring exhibitions should send for entry blanks as soon as possible to Mast, Nichols, Madison, Wis.

For Farm Labor.

The Bureau of Labor at Madison is making an effort to assist farmers in getting a supply of labor. Farmers who desire help, and workingmen desiring to work on a farm, should write to the Commissioner of Labor at Madison or to the Wisconsin Free Employment office at any one of the following cities: Superior, Oshkosh, La Crosse, or Milwaukee (301 W. Water St.). These are state offices and there is no fee. Farmers desiring help should state wages paid, kind of help wanted, whether they would pay railroad fare, etc., and persons desiring work on a farm should give references, state experience, wages desired and any other information that will enable the state to intelligently place persons desiring work on farms.

PROMPT COWS.

Some Valuable Points on Building Up a Dairy Herd.

The dual purpose cow does not exist. All progressive farming of late days makes the dividing line all the more distinct between the beef and dairy breeds. The farmer has not yet been found who can produce a herd of cattle that shall lead in both dairy and beef products at the same time. I assume that we are aiming to have the best dairy herds and make as much money as we can.

First let me insist that every dairy man should select the dairy breed that suits him best, taking into consideration, among other things, climate, food he is prepared to furnish, kind of barn he has, market for his milk and his personal taste. Decide and act promptly in the matter.

Get a Good Sire.

Next purchase a pair or trio, and with them lay the foundation of a pure bred herd. If expense makes this impracticable, purchase a registered sire and get a calf from a cow with good record of production. Get the best possible sire of the breed chosen as he is half the herd.

The next step in grading up a herd is to be sure not to interbreed. When you have heifers old enough to breed, purchase for them another sire.

When the third, fourth or fifth grade has been reached, you will have a profitable herd, which, while it cannot be registered, will show splendid results.

Another step—not breed any heifer until she is nearly or quite two years old. Breeding heifers too young is the leading cause of every ill bovine flesh in her, and the balance may be charged to interbreeding.

Food and Care.

Food and care bestowed upon a herd form an important part in this upbuilding of the herd. Cruelty and profligacy may largely counteract the effect of a proper amount of protein, an unbalanced temper spoil the result of a balanced ration, and comfortable quarters are needed as much as proper food.

Poor and unprofitable cows should be picked out and disposed of, the safest process being to weigh the milk and test for butter fat. One thing more—must look well to the health of the herd. We can buy healthy cattle and largely keep them so if we will supply pure air and sunshine as well as feed and water.

Success in building up a dairy herd will depend largely upon the love and interest you put into the work, combined with talent, skill and energy.

Mr. and Mrs. Gust Erikson are happy over the arrival of a baby girl.

DAIRY WISDOM.

Remember there will be no advancement, no upgrading, unless you have secured the best breed, most propitious animal at the head of your herd that is obtainable. Improvement only comes through the superior qualities of the heifers used.

Marsfield Times:—It is said that an astronomer has recently discovered that the planet Mars is inhabited by the same as this earth is. We don't know what authority he has for saying so, but it nevertheless furnishes a wide field for imagination. Supposing what he says is true, what are the people like? Do they get married and have divorces, five o'clock teas, snow to shovel and lawn mowers to push? Do they have thaw trials, murder cases, appendicitis and grip? Do they dress as we do and have automobiles and ironing ice mails? Do the men go fishing when spring house cleaning comes and use the same kind of bait they do out at Rice Lake? Do they have politicians, patent leather shoes, pumpkin pies and spring poetry? Have they a Roosevelt, a Bryan or a Garret Nation? Can they hatch chickens without a hen or make ice in the summer time? Do they have combines, beef trusts, bulls and bears, high finance and clearing house certificates? Are there long distance telephones, phonographs, paved streets, electric signs, wooden bananas and horseless carriages? Do they have fancy balls, codfish balls, highballs and canoon balls? Do they have cyclones, storm cellar, thunder and lightning, Adams Standard and Boston baked beans? Do they know who discovered America or why Tom Malone celebrates the 17th of March?

Defects of speech such as stammering, mustard-packs, and other uncommon remedies for rheumatism are so prevalent in Germany that the government is said to have instituted a campaign against them by establishing a special department in the medical college of the University of Berlin, both for the cure of such impediments and for educating doctors how to treat them. Perhaps the suggestion is unkind, says the Baltimore American, but would not the trouble be more readily disposed of by going to the root of the matter and adopting a new language—one easier to get the tongue around?

Bees-stings, mustard-packs, and other uncommon remedies for rheumatism will have to take second place, in the matter of oddity, to a cure discovered in Australia. A whale, stranded on the beach at a health resort, had been cut open, and a freakish invalid plunged into the mass of blubber, reduced there two hours, and found himself free from rheumatism when he crawled out. The incident seems to be vonched for, and although the prescription is more novel than enticing, probably many sufferers would like to catch a whale and try it.

Scores of handsome improvements in the new city of Manila are planned or partly in being. ## Cranberry Notes

Wild Cranberries.

It may not be generally known that the cranberry, so much esteemed for Thanksgiving, Christmas and other festive occasions, grows wild, in great abundance, in eastern North Carolina. On a recent trip to Columbia, N. C., the writer saw large quantities of the berries scattered through the streets and inquiry elicited the information that they had been gathered in marshes five miles distant, and that other extensive cranberry areas are located in Hyde, Tyrrell, Currituck and Dare counties.

These cranberry areas have never been cultivated. In fact, very little attention had been given to them, mainly on account of lack of railroad facilities and the further reason that the ownership of much of the land is in dispute.

Though wild, these berries are unusually large, richly-colored and of delightful flavor. It can only judge by the plentiful crops now annually borne by the wild bushes, a little attention to the industry would result in enormous yields of the finest quality.

There is every reason to believe that if those marshes were in the hands of enterprising men who understand the growing and handling of this species of fruit, the business could be made one of great profit.

The Columbia section, in which the cranberry areas are located, was recently made accessible by the completion of the Norfolk & Southern Railway's line. In that direction, and is rapidly filling up with desirable class of settlers who are going into the truck-farming business extensively.

There is, according to United States Government soil experts, no better situation on the entire Atlantic coast for growing early vegetables, particularly for onion culture.—Fruit Trade Journal.

Substitute for Cranberries.

New York Feb. 7.—Görd Skarstedt, a Swedish horticulturist and friend of the King of Sweden, arrived Wednesday aboard the White Star liner Oceanic with the intention of introducing to the American public that like cranberries a delicacy called the lignum berry and guaranteed by Mr. Skarstedt to be better than the berry that goes with the great American Thanksgiving bird. He does not intend to drive out the cranberry industry, but merely to persuade the cranberry growers that they may yet grow out of their bags if they cultivate the Swedish product in place of the American.—Fruitman's Guide.

Present an Old War Claim.

Congressman Morse, of Antigo, who represents this district in Congress, will at this session of the legislative body of the United States introduce a bill providing for the payment of a war claim to a lady of Merrill. A bill has been introduced in Congress many times for the relief of the woman and the payment of the money that is justly due and owing her. It has been reported favorably by the committee, but has never passed the house.

Mrs. Kathryn McCarthy, widow of John McCarty, 501 Genesee street, is the lady in question. At the time of the Civil war Mr. McCarty was rafting logs down the Mississippi river. The union army needed the logs and took them and the commander gave him a receipt for the logs. The timber was used in building ships. The value of the logs was placed at about $10,000, and practically represented every penny he had at the time. The records of the war department show that they were taken and never paid for.

Mr. McCarty was a loyal union man, and the fact of his ownership, the fact of the government in taking his timber, and his loyalty has never been questioned.

The principal reason ascribed for the non-payment of the claim before was that the congressman did not want to allow the claim for fear that similar ones with perhaps not as good legal support would be brought up for payment, also.

Miss Anna Daly returned on Tuesday from Valparaiso, Ind., where she had been called by the sickness of her brother, Walter, who had been afflicted with typhoid fever. He had recovered sufficiently to return with her.

The origin of allowing a woman to nurse during leap year is attributed to Scotland. In 1226 the Scottish parliament passed a law making it obligatory on a man to accept the proffered hand of a woman during leap year under penalty of a fine of £100 or less, according to his financial standing. And he had to go to the lion, too, unless he could show that he had proposed during the past year, or that some other maiden had seen him first.

By order of the Committee.

Servants Demand Rights.

Domestic servants in San Francisco being scarce, all cooks and housemaids in the relief camp were ordered out.

They declined to go till they were readily, protesting that they were just as much entitled to a pension at the public expense as anybody else.

HANSEN.

An epidemic seems to have struck the dogs of the neighborhood. A large number have disappeared suddenly or else passed to the happy hunting grounds on their own door steps. Some of them we could readily spare—perhaps twenty per cent, but always among the number, there are dogs of some value to the neighborhood and the owner. It is a discreditable predicament to be placed in to walk along a country road in broad daylight and make the butt of attraction of one to five dogs at every farm house.

Saturday, the 22d before a legal hearing, the banks will not be open, and persons who expect to do business should govern themselves accordingly.
